

Main Takeaways

Jane Smith is having difficulty with independent toileting and due to pain in her knees she is also having trouble with independent showering. Her care plan has been adjusted in the morning for additional support with hygiene and personal care.

Caregivers have been provided with transfer technique training - some prompts to help with standing include: rock back and forth before standing, count to 3, position legs at hip width apart, lean forwards so nose is in front of toes for the stand.

Environmental adaptations are suggested - a raised toilet and raised armchair will help Jane Smith to stand up more easily and minimize pain in her knees.

Note: Casey provided kind, compassionate care when helping Jane shower, reassuring her and enabling her to perform tasks independently.

Over the last month, we noticed that the Sensi in your loved one's home was picking up on increased difficulty doing every day things such as showering and toileting. We had a talk with Jane about getting her some help for these tasks, and she said that ever since then she feels a lot safer and has been feeling less pain.

We also made sure to review proper transferring techniques with all of the caregivers on your loved one's case, and have noticed a decrease in difficulty with those tasks.

We are here if you would like to discuss anything in this report further.

Warm Regards,

Carrie Johnson
